

One of the largest online sources for knowledge on organic food and farming systems in the world

The online archive is FREE of charge

The online archive Organic Eprints is for everyone who has an interest in obtaining and sharing knowledge of organic food and farming systems. The archive goes back to 2002 and contains tens of thousands of electronic documents (eprints).

Whether you are teaching, carrying out research, are a consultant or otherwise giving advice, you can benefit greatly from the knowledge available in the online archive. Also, if you are doing hands-on work in the field, in the stable or in the orchard, Organic Eprints may have the information that can bring your production to the next level.

On Organic Eprints you find

- Scientific publications
- Agricultural magazines and newspapers
- Conference papers and posters
- Books
- And much more...

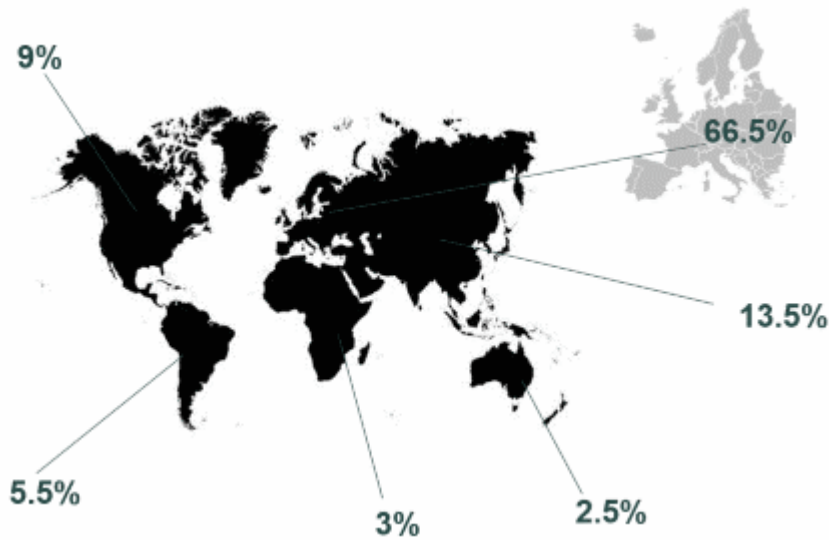

Users' benefits

- Easy access to more than 20,000 eprints
- Direct download
- Get e-mail alerts on your favourite topics
- No need to register
- Free of charge

Authors' benefits

- Better dissemination
- More citations

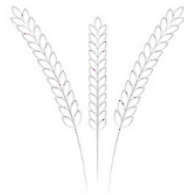

Distribution of registered users

- Tens of thousands of people around the world have signed up
- The archive has several thousand daily visits.

Distribution and origin of eprints in the archive

No matter where you are in the world, you can download or upload eprints whenever it suits you.

More information, please contact orgprints@icrofs.org

www.orgprints.org

